

Dear Friends,

It has been two years since Boko Haram abducted nearly 300 Chibok Christian schoolgirls. The global rallying cry to "Bring Back Our Girls" has not stopped Boko Haram from targeting women and girls with heinous crimes including kidnappings, rapes, forced pregnancies, forced conversion, and murder by forced suicide .

While the Chibok girls remain in captivity, Boko Haram continues to act with total impunity, abducting an estimated 2,000 more women and girls.

No less a global shame is how Nigeria treats girls who have escaped captivity, who as war victims, have clear rights under international law. Rescued girls face persecution for their "association" with their Boko Haram rapists. Many of these women and girls were forcibly impregnated, and due to US restrictions are unable to access abortion services, a denial of their rights under the Geneva Conventions as war rape victims.

The International Criminal Court (ICC) should fast track its investigation of crimes committed in Nigeria opened in 2010, which includes crimes committed by Boko Haram. This investigation and any resulting prosecutions must include rape and enslavement as war crimes, crimes against humanity, and genocide. Last year on this anniversary the Global Justice Center (GJC) made a submission brief to the ICC setting forth evidence sufficient to trigger a genocide investigation of the abduction of the Christian Chibok schoolgirls.

Boko Haram uses sexual violence and forcible impregnation as tactics of war.

The fundamentalist ideologies of groups like Boko Haram and ISIS rely on women being chattels, inferior and disposable. The global call to "Bring Back Our Girls" must go beyond rescue and include a demand for global justice for all women and girls suffering under extremists.

Join the Global Justice Center in demanding accountability and justice for the women and girls kidnapped by Boko Haram.

Help GJC fight for justice for women and girls around the world!

In Solidarity,
Janet Benshoof
Global Justice Center

Follow us at www.globaljusticenter.net and on social media.

